

MILLER MINE IS OPENED AND ORE TO BE TAKEN OUT

G. W. Buehler, president of the Miller Gold Mining and Milling company of Brooklyn, N. Y., has arrived in Leadville to direct the work of resuming operations at the Miller mine in Lackawanna gulch. New equipment, supplies and materials are being hauled in to the property from Twin Lakes; and it is reported that rapid progress is being made getting the mine in shape in spite of the heavy snows that have not yet disappeared from the roads.

Buehler is bent upon the most exhaustive campaign of development that has ever been undertaken on the Miller property. Just before the mine was shut down last fall a vein of rich gold ore which assayed from $50 to $150 per ton was encountered in the main tunnel. The approaching winter made it impossible to accomplish any further development on the vein, and it was abandoned almost immediately after its discovery. Now the vein is to be thoroly developed by two crosscuts running each way from the main tunnel and raises driven to determine definitely the extent of the ore shoot.
